Al Davey Killed Instantly On The Dock Today

Crushed Between Two Piles While Doing Repair Work—Terrible Shock to Community

The second tragic death to occur in Wrangell within three months occurred this morning when Al Davey was instantly killed by being caught between two piles while doing repair work on the St. Michael Trading company dock.

Al Davey was born in Australia 41 years ago. When a young man he came to Canada. He was married in British Columbia at the age of 23 to Miss Nellie Murray. Before coming to Wrangell last year the family resided for 11 years at Sulzer, where Mr. Davey was employed by the late Charles A. Sulzer.

Mr. Davey was a member of the Ketchikan Masonic lodge, and was also an Odd Fellow.

Mr. Davey is survived by his wife, his son, Albert, aged 16, and daughter, Alma, aged 14. He also leaves several brothers and sisters who reside in Australia and New Zealand.

Mrs. Davey left Wrangell recently to visit friends at Campbell, B. C. She has not been in good health for some time, and it is feared that the news of her husband's death will be such a shock as to cause a collapse.

Bert and Alma Davey were consulted this afternoon regarding funeral arrangements. The young people said that they felt sure their mother would wish the interment made here, as their father had no relatives nearer than Auckland, New Zealand, and their mother no relatives nearer than Edinburgh, Scotland. The time of the funeral was set for 2 o'clock Friday, and will occur at that time from the Redmen's hall unless some message should be received from the widow which would change the plan.

NEW YORK—Sales amounted to $900,000 at the opening of the annual Spring fur auction here Monday. Bidding was generally active. Compared with the corresponding prices obtained at the Spring auction last year, today's figures showed advances ranging from 10 per cent on white fox to 50 per cent on stone marten. Other advances were 40 per cent on fisher, 45 per cent on baum marten, 40 per cent on marten and 15 per cent on cross fox.

Mrs. J. W. Pritchett, U. S. Government teacher, this morning received a communication from Dr. L. O. Sloan, Territorial Health Commissioner, soliciting her cooperation in carrying out the provisions of the act of the last legislature providing for the registration and restriction of communicable diseases in the Territory. The Commissioner points out that by sending reports to the office of the Commissioner of Health of the Territory she will be aiding the Commissioner in a manner that will make it possible for his quarterly reports to be more nearly correct. In the closing paragraph of his letter the Commissioner says: "There are cards upon which to make these reports, but if you do not receive a supply of these cards, kindly make your reports in writing, giving the name, address, age, color and sex of the person infected, as well as the name of the disease."

Man With 29 Wives Tries to Kill Himself

Bluebeard Huirt in a Los Angeles Hospital Suffering from Self Inflicted Wounds—May Recover

LOS ANGELES—James R. Huirt, who is detained under guard in a local hospital while recovering from self-inflicted wounds, is now credited with having married 29 women.

The list changes somewhat from day to day. Names of newly discovered alleged wives are added, and others are dropped.

Physicians expect that Huirt will be able to talk tomorrow.

SEATTLE—The 28th wife of Bluebeard Huirt has been disclosed here in the person of Mrs. Beatrice Andrewartha of Rossland, B. C. The most startling development that has yet come to light is that Mrs. Andrewartha's sister, Mrs. J. W. Haydon of Seattle, was married to Huirt under the name of Harry M. Lewis at Tacoma, February 19, 1919. This bride disappeared mysteriously in Sacramento the following month. Her relatives believe that she was murdered.

SEATTLE—When word was received by the police here today that Bluebeard Huirt had sufficiently recovered from self-inflicted wounds to hold conversation preparations were made to speedily clear up half a dozen local mysteries.

Downfall of the Token Poet

Listen my buckos and you shall hear
Of a lad in Token who knew no fear
He helps on a buriv in Number One
And his boss's name is Tom Ferguson.

They had finished one day so it would seem
And Tom told the lad to shut off the steam.

Up he went to the top of the quarry
Little dreaming he soon would be sorry.

The longest way 'round is the shortest way there,
He had often heard but he didn't care;

So a short cut he took, God bless his soul,
And he tripped and fell into the big hole.

Now ivory met marble as he lit on his face,
And it wasn't done with ease and grace.

His clothes they acted just like a blotter
Because when he came to, he was in the water.

"Why! I might have died!" said the unfortunate lad,
Said Harry Horn, "That would have been too bad!"

But old Tom Ferguson just looked up and frowned,
And I heard him mumble, "I wish he had drowned!"

Mrs. L. Simon and child arrived Monday on the Jefferson en route to their home in Lake Bay.

Mrs. L. C. Patenaude was a southbound passenger on the Spokane.

P. C. McCORMACK, Proprietor

To the Voting Public:

As a candidate for nomination on the Republican ticket for Senator from this division, I deem it my duty, to both the public and myself, to state briefly some of my views which will influence my course of action in the Legislature, should I be nominated and elected.

I believe in a practical, sane conservation of the natural resources of Alaska of whatsoever nature, as being essential to her greatest development.

I believe in encouraging the investment of capital in legitimate, permanent enterprises for the upbuilding of our industries.

I am opposed to exploitation methods, to which Alaska has long been subjected, both by non-resident corporations and individuals, who deplete her richest resources with sordid intent.

I believe in organized Labor, not in opposition to Capital and with destructive tendencies, but on a basis of loyalty to the Government, for educational and constructive purposes. I believe in the eight-hour day as the standard for labor, with such exceptions as necessity requires.

I believe in the profit-sharing system whenever practicable. I believe in the enactment of laws for compulsory adjustment of differences between Capital and Labor, where the public welfare is menaced.

I will support every sincere effort directed, in my judgment, to the advancement of the best interests of Alaska.

I believe in the greatest encouragement and support of the homebuilders in Alaska. I believe in the employment of home labor in preference to imported help, whenever practicable.

I believe that those who served our country in the cause of the Allies, in time of war, have special claims, in civil life, to preferment in their various vocations and positions sought.

I am opposed to anarchy and all similar theories which incite hatred for thrift and financial success, believing that they appeal to the combative and lower natures to the detriment of the finer and more elevating instincts of mankind. I am opposed to oppression of Labor by Capital. I believe in industry, in good wages, commensurate with ability and faithful performance of contracts. I am opposed to chronic idlers, either rich or poor. In short I stand for "The Square Deal," and progress.

I believe the United States of America is the best government on earth, but not perfect. I pledge my best efforts for its maintenance and betterment and toward making a better and greater Alaska.

PARENT-TEACHERS ASSN

Holds Last Meeting for Present School Year

The last program meeting for this school year of the Wrangell Parent-Teachers' Association was held at the public school building Wednesday evening, April 7. Both the president and vice president being absent, Mr. Upshaw was called to preside.

The program consisted of papers and addresses, and of demonstrations by two of the high school young people. Marion Myers illustrated the method of finding the comparative resistance of different wire to the electrical currents.

Miss Liberty Worden gave a demonstration with the sonometer. Both demonstrations were very clear, and we want more of them, but we would suggest that our scientists translate their explanations into the vernacular so that the uninitiated may understand.

Miss Armstrong showed what a large amount of instruction in First Aid work can be given in a few minutes.

Mr. Corser talked on the cultivation of the will. His contention was that the will should be cultivated in the home at the very beginning. He defined the will as the part that controls our animal reactions, and carries out our highest purposes. The school should put the romance into the harder studies like mathematics and languages, and so encourage the will to do its proper work. A man is educated, not in proportion to what he knows but in proportion to his ability to overcome difficulties.

Mr. Upshaw, from the standpoint of the man who knows, talked on thrift. He encouraged the ambition of all to carry government paper.

Mrs. McCormack read an article encouraging young people to make proper selections for general reading. Many useful and entertaining books were suggested.

Mrs. Palmer in her paper on home training emphasized the necessity of cultivating the utmost confidence between parent and child.

A very important feature of the evening was the exhibit of the work of the pupils which was displayed in both the high school class room and the primary room. The art work showed that the young people of Wrangell are getting some very practical drill that only a few young people in our small towns have the privilege of enjoying.

The association decided to hold its next meeting for business only on the first Thursday in May at 7:30. There will be election of officers for the ensuing year. Committees were appointed to take charge of a social and reception to be given to the children the Friday after Commencement, May 14.

Just a Little Too Much.

Young Fiddle was a very learned young man, and his friends were all very disappointed, not to say surprised, when he refused to accept the degree of doctor of divinity. One of his colleagues tackled him on the subject. "Ah, well," replied the learned young man, "it's enough to be named Fiddle, without being Fiddle, D. D."

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

HOPE FOR PERMANENT PEACE

Those Who Fought, and Those Who Suffered at Home, Alike Favor Some Form of a League of Nations.

Article X.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Europe was succumbing to exhaustion when the war came to an end. The terrible waste was telling. Endurance had reached the breaking point. With peace one thought ran around the world: There must be no more war. The men who did the fighting said it loudest.

"I'm glad I had a chance to do my part—I wouldn't have missed the 'show' for a million dollars, and I wouldn't take a million dollars to go through it again," is the way they put it. Everywhere in Europe I heard, "It is over, it is finished, thank God."

The first thought of reconstruction was a plan to make peace permanent.

The laboratory and the machine shop gave to this war a terrible meaning, new agencies had been introduced to kill and maim men, liquid fire, mustard gas, high explosives, bombs from the clouds, torpedoes from the sea depths. The world was horrified. The length of the war, the number of dead and crippled, the raiding and bombing of defenseless cities taught the world that an end must be put to war if civilization was to live.

So the people, particularly the working people, took heart when a League of Nations was suggested as a means of enforcing peace. They placed their hopes in it. They had suffered most from the war. The dead were largely their dead. The returning cripples were blood of their blood. As they put it, they were from their class. Of course the sons of the other class fought, shared the hardships, paid the price, but they were few. The group from which they came is small, while the toll of casualties from labor's ranks was large.

All men know that controversies between nations are inevitable. In the absence of some scheme of arbitration there is but one way that these controversies can be settled. It is force—war.

It is not uncommon for individuals to have serious differences of opinion. Every lawsuit, and there are thousands of them in every city of every country, represents a difference of opinion. If we did not have courts providing a peaceful determination of these disputes, the litigants would be compelled to settle their differences by force. Assault and battery would succeed orderly procedure. Nations have been without a peaceful means of adjusting their difficulties, and as a consequence they have been compelled to resort to force. Until some scheme of arbitration is created, to talk peace is to waste words, to hope for it is idle dreaming.

Peace Conference Fell Short.

The peace conference met in Paris. Labor watched it. At an early stage in its proceedings intrigue was discovered at work. Wrangling, bickering, bargaining and trading for commercial advantage occupied the time and thought that the world expected would be devoted to the building up of a league that would at least decrease the chances of future wars. Statesmen in their blind devotion to expediency lost sight of the great reason for the conference. They talked of boundary lines, discussed frontiers, and always from the point of view of financial and military advantage to their respective countries. It was noticed that the territories over which they quarreled were rich in minerals or some other thing of great commercial advantage. They squabbled over spoils. Then, too, these men who were supposed to be concerned in the future peace of the world, in arguing over frontiers urged their respective claims on the grounds that their respective countries needed these frontiers to make them secure in future wars. What future wars and why the discussion of future wars at the conference, the object of which was future peace?

Working men watched, listened and thought. They construed these bickerings and wranglings as evidence of the fact that there is an interest in the world which does not believe in giving up force. I am only reporting the truth when I add they suspect this interest is Capital.

If the League of Nations falls this suspicion will be confirmed. The movement toward an internationalism of the workers will be given great impetus. The League of Nations failing, they argue there is only one other means of preventing war. It is for the men who make up the rank and file of the armies in time of war, the millions recruited from shops, factories and fields, to get together and organize an international labor authority to save the working men from war. Such a movement would take away from governments an important and necessary function and give to one class in the world a power so great that political governments would be puppets in their hands, and yet in the light of the happenings of the last five years labor could not be blamed. The world is entitled to protection against such slaughter as we have just gone through, and if the political governments fail to take the necessary steps the plain people will.

World Now Closely Knit.

Internationalism is coming—in fact it is already here. Inventions have brought the people of the world close together. The wireless and the cable give us the happenings of remote parts of the world in a few hours. Distance has been destroyed. We are becoming neighbors in knowledge of each other, whether we live on the same continent or not. Modern transportation is shortening the time between places. An air service is in prospect which promises to make London as near New York tomorrow as Chicago is today.

We already have a successful internationalism in finance and credits. Big business long ago obliterated national lines. The commerce of the world is already organized internationally.

The important question at this time is what form will the new internationalism take? Will it be an internationalism of organized dollars? If so, the world is in serious danger of a financial autocracy. Will it be an internationalism of organized labor? If this happens it means the dictatorship of the proletariat. Both are equally undesirable. No part of the people should be permitted to enforce their will upon the rest. One kind of slavery is as bad as another. The great majority of the human race wants freedom, not advantage. It is not ambitious to dictate—it will not be dictated to.

A League of Nations is the solution. It is a union of the nations of the world, and as the nations of the world represent all the people of the various states such a combination is democratic. That it is necessary is plain. Rivalry for markets, competition for trade, are bound to lead to war unless we have an agreement that these and other problems will be submitted to arbitration. It is not necessary to submit questions involving national honor. Few of such questions ever directly provoke war. It is when nations fighting each other for markets reach a point of positive disagreement that they begin calling each other names. These insults wound honor, war results.

Peace Table Proves Worth.

A League of Nations is a continuance of the peace table, and notwithstanding the wranglings of the present peace table there would have been war in Europe before this if it was not sitting in Paris. Two cases serve to illustrate. The coal fields of upper Galicia, to be determined by a plebiscite between Poland and Germany would have been a cause of war if the peace table was not in existence. Poland had troops on the border. Germany had her soldiers at the frontier. One thing, and one thing alone, prevented war—it was the fear of the peace table. The same facts described the controversy between Poland and Czechoslovakia; war has been avoided by the peace table submitting the Teschen question to a vote of the people of the territory.

No League of Nations will have much effect upon the future peace of Europe which does not include the United States. The nations of Europe do not trust each other. Every one respects the fact that the United States does not seek territory in Europe. This gives our country the commanding place as the one disinterested power in the world. With this moral force we can do much to maintain the peace of the world. The propaganda of revolution coming out of bolshevik Russia, urging the workers to organize an international dictatorship of the proletariat and seize the world, is not nearly as dangerous to the peace of the world as the political heckling against the League of Nations.

TAXES IN GERMANY HEAVY

Individuals Are Beginning to Feel That Country Really Suffered Defeat in the War.

The individual German has not begun to feel the peace terms, financially.

During the war the Germans have been loaning their money to the government. This year they have begun to give it.

There is an estate tax graduated as to size and as to relationship. It imposes the heaviest tax on the largest inheritance from the most distant relative.

A peculiar feature of this law, illustrating its severity, is a provision that in no case may the tax exceed the amount of the inheritance taxed. No mean cousin can leave "spite money" which would compel the recipient to pay more than he got, anyhow.

An income tax ranges to about 70 per cent as the income grows.

There is a profits tax and a heavy tax on wealth increases during the war—to get the profiteers—the usual taxes for revenue, heavier than ever, and a capital levy is being considered.

With food, coal and clothing short, they are bound to add to the discontent. Agitators will make the most of the crisis.

But Germany has weathered two crises as serious: In the most difficult months just after the surrender a year ago; and the peace conference period, when she woke up, as loser, to the terms.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RADICALISM IN THE SADDLE

Without a Definite Program, People Everywhere Are Demanding a Change in Present Conditions—Threat of "Direct Action."

Article XI.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Radicalism in Europe is rampant. The workers are active, the middle class sympathetic. The industrial centers are hotbeds. The conservatism of the farmers and peasants is breaking down. It is hard to define this radicalism—it is without form. It isn't a definite program, it isn't even political. The people are dissatisfied. The red flag is popular. It promises a short cut. It answers the cry of the impatient. I was surprised to see many of the very men who fought so gallantly under their country's flag and who but yesterday would have torn the red flag from the flagpole, now defending it, carrying it and following it. I am sure they do not know what the red flag stands for. To them it represents a protest against things as they are. Summed up in a word the attitude of mind of the workers of Europe is eagerness for a change—some change—any change. Every one knows the symptoms, understands what is wrong, but the remedy is only vaguely discussed.

I attach much significance to the new attitude of organized labor in Europe. Labor unions formerly concerned themselves with wages, terms of employment, shop conditions, safety appliances, recognition of their right of collective bargaining. Since the war the labor movement has taken up questions entirely outside of its field. Questions properly the concern of all the people, questions of government policy. I have in mind recent demands made by the working men in England, France and Italy. These demands were addressed to the regularly and properly elected representatives of the people, the governments. They were accompanied by threats of general strikes if they were not acceded to. This step is an innovation; it is revolutionary.

The working men are citizens and have a voice in the government equal with all other citizens. After the people have selected their representatives, the men chosen should be responsible to all of the people without regard to class or station. A government by one portion of the people is autocratic. Government of the people, for the people, and by the people, means all of the people. The effort on the part of a minority in the labor movement, who challengingly call themselves socialists, to dictate to the state, representing all of the people, is an attack upon democracy. If successful it would destroy the state and leave the great majority of the people, including the workers, less free than they are now. What sane man, whether he is a working man or not, is in favor of minority government?

Demands Hard to Understand.

I witnessed many demonstrations in Europe under the red flag, in which the leaders demanded three things from the government.

First, they demanded the release of all the men in jail who were held for political crimes. These included men found guilty of sedition and treason during the war. I cannot understand this demand. Why should men be released from jail who sought to stab in the back the men who went to the trenches to fight and die for freedom? I should much prefer to see all of the burglars released. If I am compelled to choose between the traitor and the burglar, I will have no trouble in making my decision.

Second, they demanded that no soldiers be sent to Russia. The agitation on this point was so strong that when the British government attempted to send soldiers to Russia last summer (1919), the soldiers mutinied, and so far as I am able to learn the feeling was so strong, the situation so critical, the government did not dare court-martial them.

Third, they demanded that all conscription laws be abolished.

It is apparent that these demands, coming from a minority, backed by a threat, constitute an invasion of the rights of the people. The question isn't whether or not one believes these things should be done; the issue is the method resorted to. Personally I do not believe soldiers should be sent to Russia. In my opinion allied intermeddling has been stupid and harmful, but if these matters of general public policy are to be decided, all of the people should have a vote in making up the verdict.

When you consider this new attitude of labor in conjunction with the growing popularity of "direct action," it indicates that the labor movement is losing faith in law and political action. I am not saying that their experience with politics, their betrayal by men they have supported, the default of political parties to carry out pre-election pledges, may not be responsible for a distrust in political government. I am not denying that capital has had the ear of government more than it should; that property has been given more thought than human beings. I am concerned with the danger that these innovations promise, a danger to the working men themselves, a menace to law and order, without which no one is secure, without which there can be no freedom.

Political Action Called Failure.

I heard a speech in London that deeply impressed me. It was applauded by several thousand men and women—average good British working people. Most of the men wore service badges. The speaker, a clean young Englishman of about thirty-five, said:

"Political action is a failure. We vote and we are betrayed. Political parties are the agents of bands of capital. Their purpose is to keep the workers apart, knowing that divided we are powerless. The only time they are willing we should unite is when war calls for men. What did we win in the war? Nothing. We thought we had a stake in the game, that the hand we were playing was our own. Now that it is over we have discovered that we won nothing."

"What did the working man ever get by voting, except the worst of it? The word vote comes from a Latin word, meaning 'to wish.' Who ever got anything by wishing?"

"We are like the story in Bellamy's 'Looking Backward.' You remember he spoke of a coach. On top of this coach the capitalists sit in the sunshine enjoying the ride. On the side of the coach, hanging by their fingernails and toenails are the hundreds of thousands who make up the middle class. Millions of men are pulling the coach. They are sweating and struggling—they are the working men. Running along the side of the coach are millions more, fighting to get a chance to get hold of the rope and pull the coach. They are the idle. There is only one thing to do. That is to stop pulling the coach, let go of the rope. Don't wish about it; do it. The fellows on the top of the coach don't do any wishing—they boss and drive."

The crowd cheered. There is some truth in the speech. It is true that the working man has not had a square deal, but the fact that he has not had fair treatment does not make the plan of direct action a sane, wise plan. Revolution would only lead to blood and disorder and leave the very men who revolted in a worse plight than they are now. The millions who are the majority have an infinitely better weapon than force. They have the ballot. They are in the majority. Men must think their way out of the wilderness. They cannot fight their way out. When they try to they go deeper in.

Bolshevism Finding Favor.

I found the word bolshevism in the minds and on the lips of the working people of Europe. I expected to find them ant bolshevik if for no other reason than that bolshevism came from Russia and the bolsheviks made peace with Germany while the allies were in a death struggle with her with the result in doubt. I found them confessing their faith in bolshevism, speaking of it as a new religion, resenting the obstacles their own governments had placed in its way.

In Ireland, the last place I expected to find a leaning toward bolshevism, I found an open devotion to it. The Irish people are in many respects the most conservative in the world. The only radicalism they have ever shown is the revolutionary spirit expressed in uprisings for freedom. The Irish are a people of reminiscence and tradition. The Celtic mind is devoted to form and custom, I was present at the Irish Federation of Labor convention held in August, 1919, at Drogheda. The delegates to this convention, representing 300,000 union men and women, went on record almost unanimously for bolshevism. I later learned that few of them, if any, knew exactly what bolshevism was. I asked a leading spirit of the convention if he believed in communism, the abolition of the private ownership of property, and he said, "Of course not; that's rank nonsense; socialism; impossible and impractical." The pro and con of bolshevism has from the beginning been partisan and prejudiced. Working men are bolsheviks because employers are against it, and employers are against it because the men are for it.

Duty Before the World.

Millions of gallant young men have fought for the new world. Hundreds of thousands died to establish it. If we fail to honor the promise given to them we dishonor ourselves. What does a new world mean? What was the old world like? It was a world where toll for myriads of honest workers, men and women, purchased nothing better than squalor, penury, anxiety and wretchedness—a world scarred by slums and disgraced by sweating, where unemployment through the vicissitudes of industry brought despair to multitudes of humble homes; a world where, side by side with want, there was waste of the inexhaustible riches of the earth, partly through ignorance and want of forethought, partly through entrenched selfishness. If we renew the lease of that world we shall betray the heroic dead. We shall be guilty of the basest perfidy that ever blackened a people's fame.—David Lloyd George.

Golden Pheasant Feathers.

A considerable source of profit exists in the feathers of the golden pheasant, which are used in salmon fishing. These birds, which are natives of China, are the hardest of the pheasant tribe, and are not at all troublesome to rear in this country.

SEASONED

By LYDIA L. ROBERTS.

"Dear me," sighed Cora Brown as she cleared away the dishes. "Chester does not eat much lately. I wish he had the big appetite he used to have. I suppose he is worried over business. It's a dreadful mixture of high prices, strikes and uncertainties. It seems to me. Things are getting worse. I am afraid. Chester used to talk so cheerfully at the supper table, but now he just nods an answer to me and thinks and eats, only he doesn't eat enough. There, I forgot to tell him that Dudley broke the cellar window today."

The telephone rang and Cora answered. "This is Mary," said her cousin. "Will you come over this evening for a little while? Fred has gone out and I'm lonesome. I want to show you my new dress, too."

"Yes, I'll run over before I wash my dishes," replied Cora. "Chester brought work home so he won't miss me, and the children are in bed. I'll be right over."

It was only a short walk to her cousin's home, and soon the two women were discussing new styles and comparing prices. "I must go now," said Cora after an hour had passed, "there are still my dishes to be washed and Chester gets lonesome if I'm out long."

"Let's have a cup of tea and some of my fresh cake," urged Mary. "It is a new recipe and you might like it."

"I didn't eat much supper," sighed Mary. "I had a good supper ready and Fred ate a lot, but he told me of an accident he saw on the way home. It seems impossible to save much nowadays on Fred's salary, and I get so worried when I think of the expenses coming. Somehow the supper didn't taste as good as I thought it was going to."

"I should say so," said Cora indignantly. "The idea of Fred telling you all those dreadful things at supper-time. That's a nice kind of a way to season your meal."

"Oh, he didn't mean any harm," eagerly said Mary. "He knows I am interested in anything he sees. I always tell him all the little household happenings, too, either troubles or joys, and it doesn't affect his appetite."

"Yes, I tell Chester everything that has happened through the day," agreed Cora. "It keeps a man in touch with the home, and I think they should know all we have to put up with, but his appetite—oh!" she stopped suddenly and sat thinking.

"Well, let us have our tea now," said Mary.

The next night when Chester Brown came home Cora hurried to the door to meet him.

"Hello, honey, how's the day?" he asked in his usual cheery way.

"I've had a fine day," answered Cora brightly, as they sat down to the good-smelling meal. "The work has gone smoothly. I got a nice long letter from Edith that I'll read you presently and baby cut his last tooth."

"Good work!" smiled Mr. Brown. "How much is butter now?" he asked a few minutes later.

"It is five cents a pound cheaper this week, and it is good butter, too," replied Cora. "Eggs are lower, also, and I'm so glad we all like both those things, because they are so healthful for us," she continued cheerily. "I used to pity Aunt Nora when she was trying every way to coax her thin little boy to eat nourishing things."

"Well, we certainly don't have to coax our boys to eat," ruefully smiled Chester.

"No, bless 'em," laughed Cora, "and the grocer to pay keeps the doctor away. I asked Dudley today if he ever, ever, got full, and he said: 'Oh, yes, mamma, I'm full twice a year, any way, on Thanksgiving and Christmas.'"

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Chester Brown. "he is a witty little rascal."

"Yes," said Cora, watching him as she talked and much pleased to see the way the vegetables were disappearing. "I took Arnold over to Mrs. Denton's today."

"Have the boys been good today?" asked Chester as Cora brought in the dessert.

"Yes, indeed," she answered quickly and remorsefully watched his face brighten. "Arnold wiped the dishes and Dudley swept the piazza for me. I thought I would teach them to help, now they are old enough. They like the responsibility and I praised them and told them I would tell you all about it."

"Why, that's fine," said Chester, looking proud and pleased. "There need be no spankings tonight, then."

"Oh, no, they are too big for that. I find they listen to my explanations and really seem to understand why they must not do things now."

"Thank goodness," sighed Chester. "They got into so much trouble last week I felt as if I had ceased to be their father and was simply the chief spanker of the family."

"I will read you this letter now," said Cora. "It is very interesting because it tells about the ranch life."

"Children are great laugh-makers," chuckled Mr. Brown.

"You look mighty nice tonight, wife," he continued, "I haven't eaten so much supper for a long time, seems to me. Tasted extra good tonight; did you season it any different, dear?"

"Yes, dear," smiled Cora, as he threw a kiss for thanks. "It is my special new brand. I seasoned it with love mixed with understanding and spiced with cheerfulness. I've decided to use that kind right along."

PLACE FOR POPULAR MUSIC

Dance Tunes and Rollicking Choruses Appeal, So Why Hesitate to Acknowledge It?

It stands to common sense, writes Nanette van Alstyn in the Etude, that we cannot all like the same things in music any more than we can all enjoy the same things at table. And we would not be ashamed to confess to a liking for baked beans, or to distaste for angel cake. Why, then, feel embarrassment in declaring that in some moods we have a "sneaking" penchant for the trip of a popular dance tune, or the gay lilt of the latest chorus?

All music has some good in it. And remember it was not Beethoven or Debussy or Schriabin or Shoenberg who played the boys into battle. It was popular music—the "Over There's," the "Tipperaries" and their multitude of syncopated everyday cousins—that lightened the march over the dismal roads. And it was plain, Sunday-evening-at-home hymn tunes that comforted and soothed the boys when they limped out of the line. Let us, then, be democratic and admit this damaging evidence. In real life we do not—even the most high-browed of us—always converse in blank verse. Sometimes we do condescend to popular phraseology—occasionally even a slang word will fit our meaning or our mood.

RETORT COURTEOUS

She—Somebody says a man's wife has no right to interfere with his privilege of making a fool of himself. Isn't that silly?

He—Why do you object? Did you prevent me from making a fool of myself when I asked you to marry me?

ENGLISH WOMEN BUY FARMS.

Women in England are buying their own farms or their own truck and garden spaces in rather conspicuous numbers. This is an outcome of the tremendous work done by women on the land during the war. The general feeling is that there will not be much room for the common female farm laborer as time advances, but for the woman who has a little money and who looks upon farming as her profession and her life work there is excellent opportunity in this direction. On account of the compact location of the garden spaces and the cities in England, transportation of food-stuffs is easy. Garden truck and flowers grow abundantly and profusely there.

UNINTERRUPTED ROMANCE.

"And Nora's gone?" said Mr. Dubwaite.

"Yes," answered Mrs. Dubwaite, sadly.

"I hoped, after she got to be so friendly with our iceman that she would stay with us a while."

"She has merely gone over into the next block. She hasn't moved out of his territory."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

TALKED OUT.

Mrs. Flatbush—Has your husband started on his garden work?

Mrs. Bensonhurst—Oh, yes. Why, he came home from the club today awful tired.

Mrs. Flatbush—How could he get tired doing anything about his garden at the club?

Mrs. Bensonhurst—Why, his jaw ached something awful.—Yonkers Statesman.

PLEASURE IN THE FORBIDDEN.

ST. LOUIS FUR SALE LARGEST HELD IN WORLD

(Black Fox Magazine)
 Funsten Bros. & Company's St. Louis sale, which started recently and continued for nearly two weeks, was without doubt the greatest fur sale ever held in the world. Over six hundred fur dealers alone were present besides large numbers of manufacturers and other buyers. Furs were sold at the rate of about $4,000 a minute. Higher prices on all furs ruled from the very start. The total amount of the first day's sales was $5,088,000. At the end of the third day over $11,000,000 was recorded and $15,000,000 for the week. Mink had a sensational advance of 150 per cent above the last sales price and a choice lot brought $75 per skin, the highest price ever obtained for mink. Muskrat was the feature at the third day of the sale and sold as high as $6.00, with about $1.00 as the low mark. The average advance was about 50 per cent. One dark marten pelt brought $850—a record price. Cross fox advanced 10 per cent the best price for a pelt being $250. The small advance in crosses was on account of the quality of skins offered being below the average.
 On Friday, Silver Fox was offered and had a ready sale, advancing about 40 per cent and 20 per cent higher than the London advance on the same article. The demand was good and choice skins sold as high as $960. The two highest prices were paid for ranch bred skins; in fact, as was expected, most of the pelts offered were from the ranches. Prince Edward island pelts were in evidence, as were also some from the ranches in Michigan. Many dealers looked for even higher prices, and it was evident that the unsettled exchange market has to an extent at least affected prices. White Fox sold at only 10 per cent advance, while blue fox did not advance over October. Some exceptional individual skins, however, brought high figures, the lot selling at $390 a pelt. Red fox also scored a slight advance, but as it was already so high an advance was not looked for.

St. Philip's Church
The Message From St. Peter
 This will be the theme at St. Philip's Church, Sunday, April 25, at 7:30 p. m.
 The life of St. Peter gives encouragement to most Christians. Had all been like John, most would be discouraged. But when a self-willed impetuous man like St. Peter that could brag one minute and deny his Lord the next, and is not cast off, it should give courage to all.
 What such a man can say to us is always suggestive.

Bob Peratovich a Booster
 Robert J. Peratovich, a prominent merchant of Bayview, arrived in Ketchikan this week and will remain in town until after the term of the district court.
 Mr. Peratovich reports that Bayview is enjoying a great deal of prosperity as a result of the unusually successful fishing season of last year. Many new homes have been erected, all of which are supplied with every modern convenience and all the business enterprises in the town have enjoyed a wonderfully prosperous season.
 Mr. Peratovich conducts an up-to-date general merchandise store besides being interested in many other enterprises on the West Coast. He is one of the most successful business men on the West Coast and his success was won by his own initiative and energy.
 Mr. Peratovich reports that the people of the West Coast are anticipating another successful fishing season this year and are laying their plans accordingly. A great many new and up-to-date boats will be in operation this year.
 A great number of king salmon are being taken on the West Coast now, Mr. Peratovich said, but the scarcity of buyers is working a serious hardship on the fishermen. Most of the canneries in the vicinity of Bayview will be in operation again this year, however, and there is a general feeling of optimism among the fishermen.
 Mr. Peratovich brought in a number of men who were arrested for illegal fishing and whose trial will come up at this term of court.—Times.

FIRST COURT EVER HELD IN HYDER

Commissioner John T. Reed heard his first case in Hyder this Friday and released from custody W. H. Wheat, who had been arrested the previous night on a charge made by Margaret Fern, whose house was burglarized while she was absent and over $50 stolen from her trunk. The commissioner deemed the evidence insufficient to warrant binding the prisoner over. Both complainant and accused are colored. Mr. Reed, at the close of the hearing, stated that the government is determined that law and order shall prevail in this community, and that secret service men would be sent here if necessary.—Hyder Miner.

Ahead of His Time.

The dream of John Wise to cross the Atlantic in an airship was never realized, and yet that dream has become an actuality almost a half century after this intrepid navigator of the upper air made his last fateful voyage. As far back as 1843 Wise petitioned congress for an appropriation to finance his project looking to cross the ocean in a balloon which he designed for long distance journeys. For eight years he appealed in vain, the reasons given being that his propositions were not practical and that money invested in such a project would be thrown away and the lives of those who made the attempt would be sacrificed to the ambition of a visionary enthusiast. In 1851 Wise again came into the public eye by again asking congress for an appropriation sufficient to build an airship from which explosives could be dropped on an enemy either on land or sea. The same treatment was accorded to the inventor as he had received for his other projects. In 1879 Wise and several companions made an ascension at St. Louis, and were never heard of afterward.

American Clipper Ships.

In the days of the famous clipper ships, the American vessel was second to none, writes Frederick A. Collins in Boys' Life. No other country could build ships at once so staunch and so speedy. Records were established which have never been surpassed by sailing craft, and, even with the use of steam, were not bettered for nearly half a century. In 1852, the Sovereign of the Seas sailed 436 miles in a single day. The Lightning crossed the Atlantic in 13 days and 20 hours, and the James Blaine of 2,500 tons, made the voyage from Boston to Liverpool in 12 days and 6 hours. Although America led the way with the first trans-Atlantic steamship, she allowed the sovereignty of the seas to slip gradually from her. At the beginning of the war most of her tonnage was afloat on the Great Lakes or engaged in coastwise traffic and her deep-sea fleet was very small.

The Fiddler's Bill.

The world contains a great many people who are busy paying the fiddler. For some reason or another they have neglected opportunities and now they are trying to redeem the time. Some are just plain fools and they know it. Others are too dense to know they don't know and it's impossible to tell them. Others are just mediocre people who have mused things up and now they are trying to iron them out. But it's all the same. It's the present trying to correct the follies that are past. We call it paying the fiddler. It's like going to a country dance, and then when you have had all the fun you have to dig down and pay the fiddler. A good many people have to pay the fiddler because they got the notion they were smarter than other folks.

Mystery of Colonial Days.

In 1676, on June 12, the settlement of Hadley, Mass., was attacked by a force of 700 Indians. When the inhabitants were in the greatest danger, a mysterious Englishman suddenly appeared and led a counter-attack against the Indians, who were defeated and driven off. The stranger, who had never been seen before in the village, was said to be General Goffe, one of the judges who had condemned Charles I to death, and who had fled to the colonies for refuge. It was supposed that he had been living concealed at the house of a clergyman in Hadley. After the conflict he disappeared and was never heard of afterward.

Fenian Invasion of Canada.

On the 6th of June, in 1866, President Johnson issued a proclamation forbidding the Fenians, a revolutionary society aiming to free Ireland from British rule, to organize and arm in the territory of the United States with intent to invade Canada. The Fenians in a body of 1,500, including many ex-Union soldiers of Irish birth, had assembled at Niagara Falls and crossed into Canada on the 1st of June. The following day they engaged in a skirmish with the Canadian militia and were driven back into the United States, where 700 of them were arrested and held for a few months.

A CANARD

(With apologies to the Bingville Bugle)

The Wrangell Sentinel exchanges news constantly with other papers of Southeastern Alaska. At the time of the recent municipal election we sent the other papers the Wrangell returns, and they reciprocated by sending us the returns from their towns. The papers of Southeastern Alaska contained an account of the Nussbaumer-McKinney wedding. The papers of Juneau, Petersburg and Ketchikan also contained a report of the fact that the Wrangell Board of Health recently filed a complaint against a citizen of Wrangell whom they charged with a violation of the law.

During the past week the charge has been made that the Wrangell correspondent sent out an account of the Health Board case as soon as the complaint was made, but was as silent as a grave without a headstone when the defendant was acquitted.

This report is a bit of fiction that is being used in a vain effort to make it appear that the Wrangell correspondent reports only such verdicts as please him.

As a matter of fact, the Sentinel has never sent out a report of an arrest without following it up with a later message telling of the verdict of the jury, regardless of whether the defendant was convicted or acquitted.

Fortunately, the cable offices at Wrangell, Juneau, Ketchikan and Petersburg all have our messages on file. And these cable office records will show beyond any possible doubt that we did send a report of the acquittal in the case in question to all the papers in the towns mentioned.

Therefore, it appears that some one has been attempting to have a little fun by romancing.

Canards of this kind may be started purely as jests, and while they may not do any particular harm, they are not calculated to accomplish anything very wonderful in the way of promoting tranquility, peace, harmony and brotherly love.

A LONG CABLEGRAM

Ketchikan Chronicle Publishes What Is Probably the Longest Press Dispatch Ever Sent From Wrangell—464 Words Prepaid—Over the Signature of Dr. A. Brown Kearsley

Wrangell, April 19, 1920.

Editor Ketchikan Chronicle:

In your issue of April 7th, 1920, your press dispatch correspondent from Wrangell charges that I ignored, or said that I would ignore any order emanating from the Health Board of Wrangell. What I did say was that I would report all cases of infectious or contagious diseases coming under my practice to the Wrangell Health Board but not to Dr. S. C. Shurick, the Wrangell health officer. And I have continued to report such cases, notwithstanding that I had been, and were at the time of my arrest, constantly violating this order.

What I wish to say is that I believe in fair impartial treatment through the press and I feel that I am justified in asking that a correction be made in the press dispatch sent to your paper from Wrangell on April 7th.

On April 8th, one day later than the appearance of item referred to, I was arrested, charged with encouraging a Native woman under quarantine to tear down quarantine notice and remove the flag. In the same complaint I was also accused of ignoring orders of the local health board.

Both these charges were sworn to and I was presumably arrested on a double charge. It took the jury less than one half hour to render a verdict of not guilty.

On the evening of April 8th I visited the city council room, accompanied by Mrs. Otto Klose for the purpose of protesting against allowing Mrs. J. W. Pritchett to mingle with Wrangell people after visiting persons under quarantine and I considered the treatment I received from Mayor Pritchett not only discourteous but insulting. When I informed my husband he went to the council rooms for the purpose of making Mayor Pritchett apologize and attempted to take hold of him but was restrained from doing so by the councilmen present. A warrant was sworn out April 9th charging my husband, Edward Kearsley, with assault and battery.

In this case the jury also rendered a verdict of acquittal. My reference to these court cases is to show that it is not a matter of personal persecution but more a matter of personal persecution and that I am made the victim of premature lying press dispatch for the benefit of a lying press agent.

A large majority of the Wrangell people understand the situation and I feel it my duty to present the facts in this case as they are and not as your correspondent wished it to be. Hence I ask that this letter be published as soon as possible as a vindication of at least an intended injury.

Respectfully yours,
DR. A. BROWN KEARSLEY,
Wrangell Hospital.

Above article says:

"A large majority of the Wrangell people understand the situation."

We'll say they do.

THIRTY-THREE YEARS IN WRANGELL

(Crowded out last week)
On Monday L. Schott was around town in a jovial mood and was several times observed treating his friends. A brief conversation with him disclosed the fact that he was celebrating the 33d anniversary of his arrival in Wrangell. He stated that he and Lem Churchill arrived on the same boat, the old Ancon. He says there were only a few white men here at that time and they were divided into factions. How different it is now with every one a friend to everyone else, and all working together in harmony and all boosting for the town.

In Old England

Percy—Did you read the address by King George published yesterday afternoon?
Harold—Yes, and wasn't it a masterpiece. Who do you suppose was the author?

A Beautiful Girl

A handsome, debonaire chap was lunching at a downtown restaurant. His eyes at intervals would roam appraisingly over toward the bewitching little cashier. Presently he rose, took up his check and sauntered confidently over toward her desk.

"Nell," he gushed, "you're positively irresistible today! Tell me, girlie, why do you stick around a dump like this? Why, you're beautiful enough to draw $10,000 a year in movies—"

She looked him over coldly and remarked:

"Mister, you've got some egg on your chin."
